Washington.—Charles G. Dawes, director-general of the bureau, after declaring Congress had provided fully inadequate machinery for the new Bureau of the Budget, announced that in organizing his office he would have to put chief reliance on the voluntary services of experienced business men.

"When the call came to me in this place," said Mr. Dawes in a statement in which he appealed to business men to give their assistance without compensation, "I did not say about resigning, but I was compelled to do so in such a task as you have. Only the thought that if I declined the President's call in a time of business emergency like this I would regard myself as a pusillanimous quitter the rest of my life led me to accept."

It may be one of you who, after enjoying the benefits of great prosperity, success and prestige under the protection of a Government which you claim to love, declines to accept this call, except for reasons of life and death, your conscience will be cursed by the thought of what you have done."

Congress, the statement said, had given the budget director authority to choose only two paid assistants at a salary of not over $6,000 each.

"One might well wonder," Dawes, "with which tunnel Pike's Peak."

In addition to the voluntary aid to be summoned, the new director said he would ask the War Department to detail to his bureau Brig. Gen. Geo. V. Mosley and Col. Henry Smither, because they were the two most prominent officers in the Army who had been in the service of the League of Nations.

The work is well under way in a large number of the States. Twenty-four ratifications are required to put the statute into effect, and these are assured, according to the Council's information, the Hedgaz making the twenty-fourth country where ratification has been effected.

It bore the endorsement of the National Catholic Welfare Council, the United Synagogues of America, the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The last three services were Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Disciples of Christ, Congregationalists, Catholics, Unitarians, Friends and Rabbis.

Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, of New York, chairman of the committee, told the press that no other document of the same representative value in the disarmament movement ever had been prepared.

The period for which the volunteers are to be summoned will begin August 1, a month after the Budget Law becomes effective, and will continue until December 1, when the annual budget is to be submitted to Congress.

Mr. Dawes let it be known that he himself expected to retire from the directorship as soon as the December budget had been completed.

Mr. Dawes said bureau chiefs, unfortunately, were compelled mainly to serve in the interest of their particular bureaus, but that with a new general directing agency to deal with Government expenditures this tendency might be greatly diminished.

"We was inconveniences," said Francis J. Kilkenny, his confidential secretary, and C. J. Coop, of New York, had agreed also to combat this service.
